CARRYING BUNDLES.
An Interesting Collection of Anecdotes, including One of Longfellow.

In the matter of carrying bundles
A gentleman of thirteen years—a millionaire—is once chink in a book-store, and tells this story of the late Jonathan Phillips, who came into the store one morning and purchased a book. After doing so, the clerk said "Mr. Phillips, I will send this to your house." "No" said he, "young man, I will tell you a secret. When you get to be as old as I am you will learn that the most independent man is he who has a servant. It is related of Dr. Parkman, the same who was murdered—that whenever he bought a leg of mutton he carried it home himself. On being asked why he did this, he said "he wanted to be sure of the one he had picked out." There is somewhere a picture of Lord Jelon, the famous English lawyer and judge, that a lawyer might carry a green bag or a fresh fish through the streets. The latter perhaps for the same reason that Dr. Parkman did his mutton. But quite another this would be good law in Beacon street? An eminent ex-patriot of Massachusetts, who was born in the country returning to Boston with a clasp-case from a short journey, kindly carried the portmanteau of the latter through the streets in order to save his feelings in case they should meet any Bostonian of his acquaintance.
This was almost half a century ago. To-day so many men, women and children are rushing about with bundles to teach the cuss that even an undiscerning layman of Harvard would be bound to suppose that there is nearly one made of alligator skin.
Whether the polite public would tolerate a flesh fish or a leg of mutton is doubtful. Perhaps some of our readers may remember the horror expressed by an English traveler at seeing President Lincoln with a parcel in his hand. That such a man could succeed in the war then, rating the Englishman could not believe. And the ex-patriot reminds us of a little story related of Mr. Longfellow. A Parisian once remarked to him that there was one American word that he never could understand or find in any dictionary.
"What is it?" inquired the poet.
"Tateldo," was the reply. "I never heard of the word," said Longfellow. Presently a servant came in to replenish the fire. After putting on a little fuel Longfellow remarked to him, "There is Tateldo." "Hm!" exclaimed the Frenchman, "that is the very word which has puzzled me."

AN OXFORD PROCTOR.

The Origin of the Term "Plucked" as Applied to Fiduciary in Examination.

Picture to yourself a gentleman between thirty-nine and fifty years of age, dressed in a black gown, with ample velvet sleeves edged with wasp-color, and white bands (such as clergymen were wont to wear) depending from his throat, and you will have some idea of the external appearance of an Oxford proctor.

His dress is symbolic. The black gown represents the public ceremonies in which he takes part, the white bands denote the solemnity of his office, while the velvet sleeves express the softness of his manners, and the wasp-colored border suggests the sting that lurks beneath.

In dignity he ranks next only to the Vice-chancellor, he well second in the procession of magnates which files into St.
Mary's Church every Sunday to hear the University sermon, he receives the names and fees of candidates for the public examinations, and plays a conspicuous and highly amusing part in the ceremony of conferring degrees.

After each batch of new-made graduates have had a Latin incantation mumbled over them by the vice-chancellor, two proctors—in the presence not only of university officials and students, but also of any outsiders who choose to look on—readily assume the long robes and caps again without saying a word. At first there is an attempt at solemnity in their gait, but after the senseless exercise has been repeated two or three times they look, as they doubtless feel, thoroughly wretched the effort to appear dignified and the desire to get it over as soon as possible combine to produce one of the most comical effects ever seen.

The reason for this absurd performance not far to seek. An amount days any person who had money over and above his undergraduate expenses to spend, might arrest the proctor's course by plucking his sleeve, and so prevent the defender from taking his degree till his debt had been discharged. Few people know that this is the real origin of the term "plucked," as applied to failure in examination.

But this is by no means the only occasion on which the proctor has to go on duty. It is a sad fact that this splendid dignitary, with his velvet sleeves and snow-white bands, is compelled to prow about the streets by the call of a policeman. He is supported by three stalwart fellows in plain clothes, whose official title is "proctor's men," but who are popularly known as "bulldogs." —Castell's Family Magazine.

The Postmaster General recommends a reduction of local postage to 1 cent, and thinks it can only be made to pay at that rate.

TENNESSEE illustrates the growth of Republicans in the South by giving Cleveland only 9,000 votes, while it gave Fulton 13,000 majority and Hancock 24,000.

The Electors for President and Vice President will meet at their respective state capitals and cast their votes to-morrow. In some states they meet for organization on the previous day. Vacancies in any state may be filled by the electors who may be present to-morrow.

The Wilmington Star, the leading Democratic paper of North Carolina, comes vigorously to the defense of Jefferson Davis. It says: "Old Treason had most foully upon General Wade Hampton, burned Atlanta and Columbia like a vandal that he is, and he will bring up no provocation. Mr. Davis is a gentleman, and does not know how to do." They begin to feel that they are down in North Carolina.

As regards us can be ascertained at present, the total vote cast in the United States at the recent Presidential election was 6,882,163, as against 6,211,423 in 1880, showing an increase of 677,575. The total Republican vote in the country at large this year is 4,152,211, in 1880, 4,410,000, increased 338,192. The total Democratic vote this year is 4,811,221, in 1880, 4,421,937, increased 389,182. But the total Democratic vote is 23,001. The largest Democratic majority is that of Texas, 88,883, the largest Republican majority is that of Pennsylvania, 81,019.

W. C. Hyatt, a traveling man from Brooklyn, N. Y., and a cousin of Gov. Chandler, was in Decatur yesterday, and talked freely concerning how lucky known, why he says, is one of the most obstinate and self-willed men in the world, and who will get his own way regardless of what anybody else wants. Mr. Hyatt pretends a strong claim to fame for his cousin, who he believes, will win the Democratic nomination. He backs up the rest by his unimpeachable desire to have his own way.

DEMOCRATIC hours now the Presidency, and they should bury up and let the business of the country understand what is going to be their policy. It is to give a need even a suggestion that making of capital will come back up until confidence is restored. People want to know about free trade, what is to be done to the banking system. Of the National banks alone 721 charter were during 1883. Their aggregate capital is $159,000,000. Will the administration carry out the wise financial policy of Republicans in resort to intrusted or exploded bank experiments? Whatever the policy is to be, the sooner it is adopted and made known the better. In the meantime the duty of good citizens every where, of every class, is to make the best of the situation. Growing and fault finding without sufficient reason will be both unwise and mischievous.

The public debt increased a little over $100,000 during the month of November, owing to decreased receipts and heavy disbursements on account of pension. It is five years since the report for any month failed to show a decrease of the debt.

Seven Union introduced three bills in the Senate yesterday, the most important being one to prevent destruction in the army on account of race or color.

An Example.

Let us see how it works! Mississipi has cast this year 121,321 votes, electing seven members of Congress. Alabama has cast this year 158,780 votes, electing eight members of Congress, and thereof no cast 19,225 votes for each member of Congress. On the other hand Ohio has cast this year 181,801 votes, and elects twenty-one members of Congress, and has therefore cast 37,371 votes for each member of Congress. New Jersey has cast this year 261,792 votes and elects seven members of Congress, and has therefore cast 37,256 for each member of Congress. The two Southern States cast 271,100 votes for fifteen members, as average of 18,070 votes for each member of Congress. The two Northern States have cast 1,015,593 votes for twenty-eight members, and the average has therefore been 37,343 for each member of Congress. In other words the political value of a white man in Ohio and New Jersey is less than half the political value of a white man in Mississippi and Alabama. And this is the sort of thing which the white men of Ohio and New Jersey are expected to hail as a blessed revolution in the interest of the people.

The federal grand jury at Chicago yesterday evidence was brought out which goes far towards fixing the responsibility for the bogus election tickets on some of the Democratic bosses, and there is great commotion among that class, some of whom are reported to be missing from their accustomed haunts. Brand himself appears to have practically given up the contest, and has written a letter to Leman proposing to have a recount of the entire district. The end seems to be not far off.

The Postoffice Department.

Postmaster General Hutton, in his annual report, states that the expenditures of his department for the fiscal year were $16,403,930, and the ordinary revenues $13,385,127. The cost of the service over the revenues for the past year was $5,204,484, and for the current year the department asks for $4,829,349 from the Treasury. A reduction of the postage on local letters to 1 cent is recommended, as also the establishment of a 10 cent special delivery by means of messenger boys. The value of postage stamps, stamped envelopes and postal cards issued upon application during the year was $11,115,757. The number of letters and parcels sent through the registered mail during the year was 11,248,145, or actually ascertained losses during the year numbered 516, or a very 21,735 letters and parcels sent. This is smaller proportion of loss than in any previous year.

European Looters.

Dr. George W. Bushnell, Ph. D., will deliver a lecture in the course on "Days Abroad" at the open house, on Tuesday evening, Dec. 26. The subject will be "The men and women of the world, the men who are delivered on time, the men who get it late, Paid and Premium rates for ticket for two persons, including a reserved seat for two persons, round-trip, single ticket, 20cts; additional to the regular 25cts. Tickets may be had at Gurd's Jewelry store, Lecture Room, 2nd floor.

CLEVELAND just now is the man around the corner whom the Democratic office-seekers are continually going to see. Governor Crittenden, of Missouri, who wants something, has just rounded the Capitol Block in Albany, and he is only one of many Southern and Northern patriots who are seeking recognition.

The Boston Musical College has received the following letter of recognition from the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston, Mass.

Lincoln, Dec. 1.—Elder John Englund died at Mt. Pulaski Saturday night, and will be buried to-morrow. He was one of the oldest preachers in the Christian church, being about 90 years of age. Some time ago, in alighting from a train at Cornland, he fell and received injuries which finally resulted in his death. He was well and favorably known throughout the central part of the state. Elder T. T. Holt will conduct the funeral services.

Worshippers Will Never Cease.

In addition to serve his patrons, Cheap Charley, the clothier, is ever devising some scheme whereby some substantial sum is exacted from him. His latest device is an electrical lamp, by means of which a great variety of operations in his shop are performed. The lamp is a small affair, and the subjects are correctly suspended over the work-bench. On lifting the cover of one of these boxes, a thin wire is seen to be attached to a small hand-pulley, the wire being fastened with a leather strap, the pulley being fastened to the ceiling. The boy is then caused to turn the pulley, and the hand-pulley is turned until it reaches the correct answer, and there it remains. In one volume one question is asked, and the answer is given in another. This is a very useful and convenient device.

"A LITTLE NONSENSE."

—Ha-ha—Supposing now, a dragoon was to miss his watch-key, why would the key then become lost unto himself? Well, because it would be a mystery to him. —"Chemist—Ah—a—London Soda-Cream Journal."

"Why, Johnnie, put down your father's pipe. You may let it fall and break it. What are you trying to look into its stem?" "O 'cause, I heard him say, last night, that there was consolation in the pipe."

"So you want my autograph in your book, do you?" said Mrs. Parvens to a little girl. "Well, honey, I'm real sorry, but I hadn't a picter tool since I was married, and I can't give it to you." —"Boston Transcript."

Delmonico said: "Very few people understand how to cook water." We should think the best way would be to boil it. Still some people may prefer it roasted or fried.

—An advertisement is headed, "Important to Chicken Fanciers."

It doesn't amount to anything, because we read it clear through and it doesn't say a word about the dark of the moon, or how to keep a suddenly awakened hen from squawking. —"Burdette."

—"What two beautiful children! Are they twins?" said an old bachelor to an Austin lady with two children. "Oh, yes, they are twins," replied the lady. "Excuse my curiosity, madam, but are you the mother of both of them?" —"Paris Siftings."

A smart young man saw, with blushing pride, a pretty actress watching him, and, growing bold too soon, he was thus repulsed: "Oh, you need not apologize for speaking to me. I did notice you; but the fact is I am studying a big silly boy's part, and wanted a good lay figure to look at." —"N. Y. Ledger."

Fading Shadows:

Sweat is the voice of the maiden fair; Soft is the voice of the matron's boudoir; Soft is the voice of the mother's window.

"For the hand's sake! But what can it all mean?" asked the first-comer of the second, who had arrived in time to hear a few of the articles mentioned.

"Humph! They are simply preparing to bring out some nice pie!" was the prompt reply. —"Detroit Free Press."

A Solemn Warning.

There are penalties as well as pleasures attending to an established reputation for being an humorist. Ferdinand Cole, whose home is in Susquehanna County, Pa., has discovered this fact to his sorrow. His specialty is, or was, facial contortions, or what the children call "making faces," by which he was wont to confuse his friends, in season and out of season. The other day he depicted his jaw in a performance so well done that the children called him to be a new and exciting attraction of his repertoire of mirth-provoking grimaces. While they laughed, poor Cole leaped out in the greatest agony, and for a time could not make his admirers understand that he was not trying to be funny. When his predicament was at last appreciated, they had a ten miles' tramp before the humorist's face was restored to its normal condition by the kindly offices of a surgeon. Presumably Cole will never again try to be as funny as he can, while in the interest of a long-suffering public it is unfortunate that other alleged humorists could not be submitted to surgical treatment. —"N. Y. Commercial Advertiser."
